Wickersham The Winner

Election day passed off very quietly at Wrangell. Tuesday, 54 votes being cast in all. Of these Wickersham received 46, Orr 6, and O'Connor 2. In all of South-eastern Alaska, as far as returns can be secured at this time, all the precincts, with the exception of Petersburg, Loring and Treadwell, went with big majorities for Wickersham. The total at this time, Wednesday evening cannot be giving with accuracy, but it looks as though Wickersham were elected by about fifteen hundred majority.

Visit Mining Properties

Ole Johnson and F. E. Smith spent the early part of the week visiting the mining properties in which they are interested above Mill Lake. They are both more than satisfied with the result of their visit, as they found the snow all gone and everything in first-class shape.

Cash Coulter was a passenger south on the Humboldt.

Mountains of Rich Silver-Lead Ore At Wrangell's Very Door

Unless all signs fail, which is rather improbable, a new era, fraught with wonderful possibilities is even now opening for this place. It will not come in an agricultural sense, though that branch of our life is even now waxing more important; not from the logging and milling industry; vital though that may be, but from the wonderful store of mineral which nature has placed in the everlasting hills around and about this place.

From Stewart at the head of the Portland Canal comes reports of such a nature that there can be no doubt in the mind of any person that the camp is not permanent, and destined to become one of the producers of the world—Stewart is within one hundred miles of Wrangell in an air line. Coming still closer, we find the wonderful deposits, of placer gold and silver-lead of the Unuk River, where even now parties are contemplating investing over three millions of dollars for the properties now known to exist there.

So much for these places, but there is still another, one which those who have seen, and know anything about mining say will completely eclipse both these others, great though they surely are. This latter is immediately tributary to Wrangell, being situated on the Iskut River, easily reached from this point.

It isn't placer, but mile after mile of mountains full of silver ore, the big sparkling galena crystals showing almost everywhere where ever the rock is exposed.

Representatives of the bigger mining concerns are turning their steps in that direction, drawn by the story of the immense ore deposits of this region, and there is every probability that the next twelve months will see some of them at work, and more will follow, for there is room for big mines by the dozen.

This is not the bare opinion of a Wrangell man, biased perhaps by the fact that he wants to see his home town progress; but that of many who have come to our gates of late or are contemplating a visit. The wonderful deposits of the neighborhood of Stewart and the Unuk are great, but those of the Iskut are bigger and richer in every respect, as time and development will demonstrate.

Wrangell is the one and only gateway to this immense region. Here must come the buyer and the miner, and here must their outfits be transhipped from deep-water vessels to river boats. Wrangell capital and people are now interested in these properties, and it is a matter of a very short time until Wrangell will feel the impulse or the new life resulting from the incoming of outside capital and people to the new mining district.

Return From The Iskut

Alex Vreath and Frank Coulter arrived down from the Iskut Tuesday evening, where they had been doing the assessment work on the properties in which local people are interested. They report that they have completed the necessary amount of labor for the current year. In so doing they uncovered several new ore deposits, and the property shows up better than ever. Assays of the ore will be made at once, the results of which are awaited with consider interest.

Messrs. Patenaude, Gartley and Miller report having the time of their lives fishing at Conk's Creek Tuesday. They left here Monday night, camped at the cabin at the mouth of the creek, that night and the next morning, bright and early, began hauling 'em in. They brought in basketfuls of fish, and Harry Gartley says that he saw a bear. There is a doubt expressed about the latter fact, however, as Harry returned with his cap.

More Game Laws

A recent report from Washington says that Secretary Wilson has issued regulations as to Alaska game, declaring open season for deer August 15 to Nov. 1. Eight deer is the limit for one hunter. Sale of deer carcasses in South-eastern Alaska suspended after Oct. until 1912. Open walrus season in Bering Straits and sea north of Kuskokwim in May to July 1. Walrus killing in Bristol Bay and Bering sea south of Kuskokwim river is prohibited until 1912.

The Wreck Of The May.

As stated in last week's Sentinel, the Princess May was wrecked Friday morning Aug. 5th, on Sentinel Island, about half-way between Skagway and Juneau. The vessel struck on a reef about three hundred yards from shore, and within a half a mile of the lighthouse. Pilot Richardson was in charge of the vessel at the time, Capt. McLeod being in bed. The passengers and their baggage were landed safely, and a wireless message sent out calling for help. The only boat within call was the Olympia far away to the south which relayed the call to Seattle and word was sent from there by cable to Juneau. The boat is high and dry at low water, but will probably be salvaged.

ALL OVER BUT THE SHOUTING

Well, the election is over at last, for which we may well be thankful. And now we can get down to the common things of life again, and for the next twenty months or so, forget that there is anything like politics in the world. We trust that the result of the election is generally satisfactory. We have no kick coming, somebody must lose, just as surely as somebody is bound to win. It is now up to the looser to smile, and forget his troubles. There's nothing gained by hanging on to a grouch.

WE'LL DO OUR SHARE

The Sulzer correspondent of the Ketchikan Miner had the following to say recently concerning a topic of interest to all in this region. We re-publish it in the hope that, as a result of giving the matter publicity, good will result:

Much comment is being made at all points on the West Coast regarding the great increase in numbers of the wolves and their terrible depredations on the helpless deer. The last few winters have been more severe than usual, which has been a hardship on the deer while the wolves have thrived.

The wolf is the deer's most terrible enemy, followed by the eagle and the bear, man coming in at the bottom of the list.

It is most conservatively estimated by those familiar with the forest and its wild animals that a wolf will, on an average, kill at least one deer a week or a total throughout the week at say 50. It is of course impossible to determine how many wolves there are, but it seems to me that 5000 would be a very low estimate of the number on Prince of Wales Island alone, which would slaughter annually at least 250,000 deer.

It would be a very low figure to say that these deer are worth $2.50 each for food to the inhabitants of the island, which would mean that over half a million dollars worth of most excellent food is destroyed every year by wolves alone, on Prince of Wales Island. These figures could be multiplied many times, and still remain within the fact.

The deer is the principal food supply of the natives, the prospector and all people living in isolated camps. In nearly all places outside the larger towns, fresh beef in good condition is difficult to get, owing to the poor transportation facilities.

Thus the deer provide one of chief food supplies of the region, and laws and legislation should be enacted to protect them for this purpose and not for sport. All laws thus far devised are aimed to protect the deer from man, and thus limit man in one of his most necessary foods. There has been no effort made to protect the deer for man but entirely to protect the deer against man, to supply whose need would certainly accomplish more to civilization and the development of the land, than the existence of wolves, eagles and bears could ever possibly accomplish.

The government should provide a bounty of ten dollars on wolves, five dollars on bears and one dollar on eagles. If such a bounty were in force it is safe to say that 500 wolves would be killed on Prince of Wales Island every year. This should cost $5000 and according to the above figures it would save during the year the handsome sum of $62,500, and it would then continue to save this amount each succeeding year. Again let it be considered that the figures are very low and it becomes apparent what an enormous amount of food is being wasted.

In addition to saving the valuable food these bounties would provide a means of revenue for the natives and prospectors that would be much needed.

In the course of a few years the wolves would be exterminated or so reduced that they could do comparatively little damage, and the deer would so multiply as to remain a reliable source of food supply for generations. Man does not hunt the deer for sport; it is hard work and when a deer is secured it is brought home and provides meat for the household. It is unjust to deny the handful of inhabitants what meat they need and can use, and allow the despised wolf to fatten and grow bold.

Petitions are about to be circulated over the west coast, and it would be well for this subject to be taken up all over Southeastern Alaska and a united effort made to secure proper action from congress.

Webster's NEW INTERNATIONAL Dictionary, (G. & C. Merriam Co., Springfield, Mass.) surpasses the old International as much as that book exceeded its predecessor. On the old foundation a new superstructure has been built. The reconstruction has been carried on through many years by a large force of trained workers, under the supervision of Dr. W. T. Harris, former United States Commissioner of Education, and reinforced by many eminent specialists. The definitions have been rearranged and amplified. The number of terms defined has been more than doubled. The etymology, synonyms, pronunciation, have received unsparing scholarly labor. The language of English literature for over seven centuries, the terminology of the arts and sciences, and the every-day speech of street, shop, and household, are presented with fullness and clearness. In size of vocabulary, in richness of general information, and in convenience of consultation, the book sets a new mark in lexicography.

According to reports the Alaska Syndicate, which has recently purchased Beatson's famous Bonanza copper mine on Latouche island, will work the property on a comprehensive scale. Diamond drills are now employed on prospect work. It is stated that by next fall over 150 miners will be employed, which will cause things to boom on the mineral island.

A KID'S VIEW

A new boy come to live next door to me the other day. Us kids all named him Skinny when he came outside to play. At first we thought that he was fine, but now we ain't so strong fer him, 'cause when he goes to swim he takes a towel 'long. We went out to the swimmin' hole on Monday afternoon. An' Skinny was so happy he was crazy as a loon. We all jumped in the creek an' swum an' dived a little while. Then Skinny got the towel out an' used it bath-tub style. Well, that stunt surely queered him with the boys, you bet it did. We thought he was a real one, but he's just a hot-house kid. The fellers call him Nicey now, an' all the neighbors say That Skinny's got a toothbrush that he uses every day—Bide Dudley.

Another Boat Line Maybe

There seems to be a general impression that a new steamship line is on the tapis for this part of the world. Treadwell is dissatisfied with the service of the old companies, and seems to be of the opinion that with the guarantee of the whole of the business of the big mine, a new line can step in and make money clear from the first.

There is some possibility that the Humboldt people will close a deal with the mining company, put on another boat to run in conjunction with the Humboldt, and thus be in a position to take care of all the business offered.
